Would Assess Real Estate Itself Rather Than the Individual Owner and Would Classify Personal Property and Tax Each Class at a Fixed Rate.

ALBANY, March 7 .-- Assessing all real estate directly against the property itself rather than against the individual owner and the classification of personal property and taxing each class at a fixed rate, mortgages are now, are the features of the suggestions made by the State Tax Commission in its report to the Legislature. The commission points out that ach year it becomes more difficult for the tax gatherer to make his collections because many owners of real property by one subterfuge or another succee evading the payment of their taxes.

"It is often very difficult to determine who is the owner of the property," says the report, "and it is also frequently difficult to determine the place of residence of such owner. These conditions present so many difficulties to the minds of the local assessing officers that they make many illegal assessments. It is our opinion that all distinction in respect to the form and manner of making assess ments against real property shoule be abolished and that all assessments of real property should be made against the land itself, by proper description thereof, and with no attempt to create personal liability against the owner occupant by carrying his name upon the roll. This could be done by the preparation of an assessment map of the real property in each tax district show-ing each parcel of real property subject to assessment, with its quantity, giving to each such parcel on identifying number for the purpose of assessment, and then making a reference in the assessment roll to the parcel by number, a sufficient identification and description thereof for the purpose of creating a valid assessment against it."

Discussing the assessment of personal property, the State board declares the present method to be inadequate and un-"In fact," the report says, "the conlitions now prevailing in respect to this matter are becoming intolerable and it serious question if it would not be far better to exempt all personal property from taxation than to continue the present unjust conditions. Personal property, in our judgment, should bear its just and fair share of the continue to just and our judgment, should bear its just and fair share of the cost of government, that great institution which protects it. It is well known that more public expenditures are required for the protection of this class of property than are required for the protection of real estate, and the owners of personal property should contribute their fair share toward the governmental expenses.

Possibly the best solution of this problem is to be found in the plan of classifying personal property and taxing each class at a fixed rate, making the rate dependent upon the character of the property taxed. It seems fair to assume that such a system, if put into practical working form, would come nearer to meeting with the general approval of the people than does the present system or any other that has yet been suggested. It is certain that such a plan would more equitably distribute the tax burdens, while at the same time producing very much greater revetribute the tax burdens, while at the same time producing very much greater revenues than result from the present system."

The Commissioner calls attention to the fact that during the past two years no substantial progress has been made in collecting unpaid taxes on special franchise assessments in the city of New York or in disposing of the large amount of litigation arising therefrom. The board urges upon the Legislature the necessity of equipping the Attorney-General with ample resources to better meral with ample resources to better to care of this important litigation.

The enactment of such a law is recommended as possibly the best plan yet suggested to put an end to the rest suggested to put an end to the rate out, if worked out by an accurate mathematical system would eliminate the present unfairness of assessing one man's piece of property at its full emissions of all nations. The board renews its recommended to put an end to the existing inequality. Such a plan, it is pointed out, if worked out by an accurate mathematical system would eliminate the present unfairness of assessing one man's piece of property at its full emissions of all nations, try, for as a descend both sides I have that I believe that I belie one man's piece of property at its full value, while his neighbor's property may be assessed at only one-half or even less than it is actually worth. The report suggests careful consideration of the question as to whether power should not be conferred upon it to require a new assessment of real property in tax disseesment of real property in tax dis-icts where there has been a clear eva-on of the statute in the undervaluation such property by the local assessors that the powers of the State board could not be broadened so as to enable to deal effectively with this important bases.

George Trumbull Ladd Says Mikado's Interest Is to Direct Emigration to the Zone of His Country's Expansion Where, Many Men Are Needed

NEW HAVEN, March 7 .- George Trumbull Ladd, emeritus professor of philosophy at Yale, and one of the best informed men in this country on Japanese affairs. gave his views to-day on the recent anti-Japanese demonstration in the West Mr. Ladd spent several years in Japan and received the Order of the Rising Sun from the hands of the Mikado. He said:

The attitude of many on the western neasure been brought about by the statement, made by agitators, that the Japanese lovernment entertains a design to overflow that section with successive waves of emigration. Such an idea is absolutely erroneous. How any same man at all familiar with conditions in the Orient can overlook the fact that it is a vital necessit to the zone of what is destined to be their leld of extension is more than I can under-

That country would be mortally injured by any rush of emigrants from the Orient to our Pacific coast. Japanese statesmen realize that there is need for every native the Japan of the future. Formosa, which in many respects is the richest part of the empire in natural resources, offers a fine field for colonization and one which will have to be provided for if the country's best interests are to be realized and is as ye ntouched. Work in the northern island of Hokaido has scarcely begun. Parfouto the war, has progressed but very little. Even on the main islands there is room for much development along agricultural lines. The fishing industry which the Portsmouth treaty has opened up has imperative demands for labor, and Corea and Manchuris are virtually virgin fields of colonization.

With all this work to be accomplished what possible reason is there for Japan to want her laboring class to go to America? Of course since higher wages are pai America than they can get any place in the of some of the workingmen to come to this cated classes see plainly that it is to the best

The principal obstacle in the way of peedy and satisfactory understanding on this point was due to the natural resent tion and culture. They would make far ther people who are now here.

I do not wish to seem to advocate letting emigrants of all nationalities into the country, for as a descendant of the Puritans on both sides I have no hesitation in saying that I believe that it would have been a far ago severe restrictions had been put on immigration, or at least on citizenship. But since this understanding has now been efvelt and President Taft have expressed themselves as satisfied that it is being car-ried out, I fail to see what cause there is

CHURCH IN ITALIAN ELECTION Helps the Government to an Overwhelm

ROME, March 7.—The elections for members of the Chamber of Deputies, the term of the previous Chamber having legally expired, were held to-day, and resulted in the return of a large ma of the candidates supporting the existing Ministry, thus insuring for the Cabinet another term of power.

Prime Minister Giolitti roughly estimates that the new Chamber will consist of 350 Ministerialists and 158 members of the opposition of all sections. One of the leading features of the con test was the suspension of the Non expedit for the first time since 1870, thus bringing many Catholics into the lists against the Anti-Clericals. The Pope, who or dered the removal of the Non expedit from seventy-two constituencies, including three in Rome, took a lively interest in the fight and scrutinized the returns telegraphed to the Vatican with great eagerness

Catholic electors everywhere were directed to support the Monarchist candidates against the Anti-Clericals. The latter, however, triumphed in five constituencies in the capital, testifying to the continued strength of that party, which won a big municipal triumph here last year under Mayor Nathan. . The returns from the country are very incomplete, but it is believed that the Clericals gained considerably. It is thought they will have fourteen or fifteen seats in the new House compared with seven in the preceding Parliament.

Premier Giolitti was returned without opposition to represent the surviving ectors of Meaning

Another feature was that this was the first general election in which the question of woman suffrage was raised. The suffragists used all their influence to procure the return of candidates pledged to woman suffrage. At Nuoro, Sardinia. a group of electors voted for Signora Del Edda, the novelist, for the purpose of calling attention to suffragism, although she was not and could not be a candidate.

BMMET'S BIRTHDAY HONORED

IRISHMEN HEAR OF GOOD WORK IN THE ERIN OF TO-DAY.

The League Addressed by Michael J Ryan; William G. McAdoo and Presi dent McGowan-Change in the Own ership of the Land a Great Help

Last night the United Irish League assembled at the Lyric Theatre to celebrate the 131st anniversary of the birth of Robert Emmet, and incidentally to hear something about the Ireland of today and its need of independent rule from Michael J. Ryan, president of the United Irish League of America; William McAdoo and Patrick F. McGowan.

Mr McGowan, who presided, told something of what the people of Ireland have been forced to endure.

"No nation has ever suffered more from coercive legislation, from tyrannical law, administered with brutal and relentless force," said Mr. McGowan, "and few could have withstood so long against such tremendous odds. Let no internal strife, let no discords or animosity among the leaders divide and weaken us now. The spirit which animates our race to-day is just as aggressive as that which prompted the noble Emmet when more than a century ago he left the land he loved so well to become the day star of her freedom forever. The powerful British Government found it impossible to coerce the honorable member from Cork, and from the cell of his prison he demanded and was accorded the amend ment to the land act, the settlement of the arrears of rent, the abandonment of coercion and the retirement of the coercice Minister.

Mr. Ryan spoke of the great good which he said, the Irish League had accomplished in Ireland. He said that less than thirty years ago half of Ireland was owned by absentee landlords and companies in London, and the rest by individual own-absentee landlords and companies in London, and the rest by individual owners.

"In 1879 Michael Davitt raised the standard of 'Land for the People,'" said Mr. Ryan, "and as a result of the agitation and organization of the splendid trinity of leagues—the Land League, the National League, the United Irish League—on the 1st of January of this present year more than half of the entire island had passed into the absolute ownership of the people of Ireland and more than 301,000 Irish farmers had become absolute owners of the soil they till."

Then he spoke of the town tenants bill, providing that no tenant in any town or city can be turned out of his holdings unless the landlord gives him compensation. He also spoke of the blessing to old men and women in Ireland of the five shilling a week pension. He prophesied the establishment of a national university in the near future and dwelt upon the benefits of such an institution to the spirit and nationality of the Irish race. In conclusion he challenged the critics of the United Irish League to show where any other organization had accomplished as much for Ireland.

Mr. McAdoo told about a trip which he made to Ireland last year. When he landed at Queenstown and was trying to get his trunks through the customs he was delighted to see the face of a smilling Irishman before him and to hear the, man exclaim:

"Good evening, Commissioner, they

He used this experience as an illustra-tion of the close connection between the Irish of America with their countrymen on the other side. Mr. McAdoo declared that the people of Ireland as he found them were the most amiable and kindly people of Europe. He said that Emmet's apeach on the eve of his execution is the living embodiment of the principle of Irish men and women to-day. In sub-stance, he said, it was that God had created a securite and distinct nation Ireland a separate and distinct nation and that it should be such a nation to-day During the evening William Ludwig sang a number of Irish melodies. His efforts were rewarded by the liveliest sort of appreciation.

There were also commemorative exercises in honor of Robert Emmet at, the Herald Square Theatre under the auspices of the Clan-na-Gael of New York. John P. Cohalan presided Most of the programme was taken up in musical numbers and the only address of the evening was made by James F. Minturn. He too thought that the only remedy for Ireland's ills is the abolition of English rule. He said that it could be accomplished by crippling English administration by passive resistance rather than by open fighting.

local division to Yonkers to participate in the annual St. Patrick's day parade. After the parade was over it was alleged that he was $48.50 short. Bartnett's defence was that the committee spent the money for drinks. He offered to make up the deficit by remitting his salary. The ex-Mayor in his letter says that the trial was more like an old English jury trial than one conducted by the "gallant sons of St. Patrick."

The local Hibernians characterize Dillon's resignation as extremely hasty, and they declare that in publishing it in a lecal newspaper he has violated one of the most sacred rules of the order. The Bartnett charges, they say, are entirely out of their hands and up to the county organization. Both R. F. W. W. Bull, Black Hand Reider, Dodge Two Bullets, but a Third Gets Him.

Detective William W Bull of Inspector Dillon's staff, who formerly was active in Black Hand raids in that district, was walking along First avenue near Thirtyeighth street last night when he heard revolver shots and saw flashes from the roof of a tenement house across the street Bull heard two bullets whiz by him and he stepped aside in time to catch a third bullet in the calf of his left leg.

It was a little after 8 o'clock, the stree was brightly lighted and there wer dozens of passersby and residents of nearby tenements on the sidewalks. They ran in all directions.

Bull, who was in plain clothes, stumbled as the bullet hit him. He bound his handkerchief tightly about his leg to stop the blood and then hurried into the tenement and up to the roof.

Everything there was silent and dark. Apparently nobody was about. Those in the house professed ignorance and offered to help the policeman search. Other uniformed men had heard the shots and ran into the tenement house. Pretty soon the reserves came from the East Thirty-fifth street station. Nobody was allowed to leave the house, which was thoroughly searched, but not a trace of a man with a revolver or the weapon Bull refused to allow the police to send for an ambulance and walked to Bellevue Hospital, nearly half a mile away. Before he got through trying to tell Dr. Hooker, the admitting surgeon, what the matter was he collapsed from loss of blood. The bullet was still in the detective's leg and its course was very markedly downward. Bull was afterward revived.

WASHINGTON, March 7 .- As far as the social end was concerned the inaugural estivities came to a close last night in a big dinner at the Raleigh Hotel, given by Representative J. Hampton Moore of Philadelphia in honor of Vice-President James Schoolcraft Sherman. More than a hundred were present, including the members of the Pennsylvania delegations in the Sixtieth and Sixty-first Congres the members of the Rivers and Harborn Committee of the House of Representatives, a good sized crowd of Senators, Regresentatives and citizens of Philadelphia; the members of the Gridiron Club of Washington and the members of the Five o'Clock Club of Philadelphia. One of the striking features of the evening was the tremendous applause which followed a complimentary reference to former Vice-President Fairbanks in the speech made by Mr. Sherman. Speaker Cannon met an Svation when he entered the banquet hall and he was applauded frequently during a speech in which he scored muckrakers and advised them to do some newspaper reporting in Washington before they attempted to tell magazine readers what was wrong with the Government. In a delicate way he referred to the fight that had been made against him by the insurgent Republicans of the House. He informed them that as the Speaker was the mere

He did not appear greatly excited over the affair. He said that he had formerly been on the staff of Capt. Garson, who about two years ago was in charge of the East Thirty-fifth street station. At that time they were greatly troubled by Black Handers. Bull, among others, was assome of the things that he had done in the House and thought he deserved censure for them instead of what the the House and thought he deserved consure for them instead of what the press was pleased to call his eloquence. In the interruption of telegraphic service due to the inauguration day blizzard little if any reference was made in the press to tributes paid to former Vice-three defent Fairbanks by the Senate. In an executive session of the Senate shortly before adjournment Senator McCumber of North Dakota in behalf of the whole body of Senators presented to Mr. Fairbanks a chest of silver. Senator Daniel of Virginia, speaking for the Democratic Senators only, presented to Mr. Fairbanks a costly loving oup as "a token of personal esteem of the Democratic Senators and as a mark of their appreciation of his uniform courtesy and impartiacity as the President of the Senate." Mr. Daniel paid an eloquent tribute to the retiring Vice-President. There was much enthusiasm while the presentation was going on. For some reason the Senators were opposed to giving a detailed account of the affair to the public."

WASHINGTON, March 7.- The National League of Republican Clubs, of which John Hays Hammond is president, has completed arrangements whereby that organization will continue to be active organization will continue to be active in the political field until the Republican National Convention assembles in the summer of 1912. At a meeting of representatives of the clubs comprising the National League it was decided to open permanent headquarters in Washington.
The headquarters will be in charge of Secretary Snell Smith, who was associated with President Hammond during the last campaign. It is the purpose of Mr. Hammond to keep in close touch with the club work, and he will spend much of his time in the Washington offices of the league.

"The National League," said Secretary Smith, "has a mission to perform.
For all practical purposes the national committee and the various State comcommittee and the various State com-mittees go out of commission between campaigns. is not a cut-and-dried thing -it is a method. A method which must be varied to meet the needs and circumstances of the thing advertised. This is why even advertising "experts" sometimes go wrong. They sometimes measure a campaign by their own particular method, instead of its wider scope.

The myriad kinds of successes in the advertising field suggest that perhaps the advertising method will solve your individual problem in an individual way.

THE SATURDAY EVENING Post represents the high peak of advertising development. As to circulation, it issues 1,200,000 copies each week.

DEPOSITS $1.200. GETS $3,80 Stranger in Paterson Works a Silet

Check Swindle There and Here. PATERSON, N. J., March 7 .- A man giving his name as Julius Gorden came to this city recently and opened an account with a local bank. He said he was about to engage in business and showed a receipt for a month's rent on a store on Main street. Then he made a deposit Main street. Then he made a deposit of $1,000.

A few days later he deposited $200 and then a check on a New York bank for $2,600. The following day he went to New York, drew a check on the Paterson bank for $3,800 and had it cashed at the Bank of the Metropolis. Meanwhile the $2,600 check deposited here had been returned marked "N. G." and when the check cashed at the Bank of the Metropolise came the actual amount of the credit of Gorden was $3,200.

It is not known how Gorden succeeded

It is not known how Gorden succeeded in having the New York bank officials can the check.

It is believed that Gorden is a professional crook.

' Ples in Bowery Mission Assistant Superintendent John H ong and Mrs. Bird were on the platform at the Bowery Mission last night when it was seen that a man in the audier was seen that a man in the audience was sick. An ambulance was sent for, but the man was dead before it came. The ambulance doctor said that death was probably due to destitution. The man was about 45 years old. There was nothing on his clothes to identify him. Mr. Long dismissed the audience.
